RANDOM PONDERINGS

They seem to be doing construction on my street that disrupts my trip plans. It is in the way of the most direct route to point B. Just sharing.

My truck is working well and meeting the purposes I intended. There some things of comfort I would like to get. Some of things are for organization and some are for seats

SINGLES MINISTRY

This past month I was able catch up with a previous partner in ministry. It was good to share with him and encourage each other.

WSM celebrated 7 years of ministry. Most ministries to singles only last less than 5 years. Our longevity is mostly because of stable leadership and a focus on ministry instead of match-making. We are not slowing down.

There is work to do for Northwest Single Adult Leaders Team (NW SALT).

CALL OUTS

A new aspect to my ministry is being the "Grief and Crisis Chaplain" for two groups on Facebook, Christians of Portland and Christians of North America. I not sure what this will fully look like when all is settled, for now it is helping people who send prayer requests or ask for assistance with grief.

My devotion this month is "Citations" posted as a blog on Myspace. I make reference to a ride-a-long, also on the ride we stopped to two teenage pedestrians. The female was very talkative and did not see "what the big deal was" about crossing 185th at rush hour with no crosswalk or intersection. She almost talked both of themselves into a ticket. I would suggest that your attitude can go a long ways in the final determination of whether or not a person receives a citation, sometimes.

I am waiting to hear about what took place at a meeting in Woodburn of the ICPC chaplains (I was unable to attend because of a Dr's appt and a ride-a-long already scheduled). One of the things that was discussed was the formation of some regional crisis response teams that I had expressed my interest in being part of. I hope to hear soon.

Take care.
