RANDOM PONDERINGS

I enrolled in a camera class. It is good instruction, but I misunderstood the first assignment and did it wrong. I am going to retake this class in October.

I made two one day trips. The first was to Mt. Hood Ski Bowl to watch my nephews mountain bike and the other was to Mt. St. Helens to see the sights and get caught by the tourist traps. It was fun those two days.

SINGLES MINISTRY

<http://www.westsidesingles.org>

I host The Northwest Single Adult Leadership Team (NW SALT) meeting on the last Sunday of month at my church. The last Sunday in July was THCC annual church picnic and the members of NW SALT joined us that event. It was good to have their participation.

Sept. 19 WSM is hosting a Navigate singles leadership training conference. We are expecting about 100 people for this event.

CALL OUTS

<http://www.nwsca.org>

I was invited to a lunch at the Oregon Burn Center to see what they do and get a tour of the facility. It is an amazing place, but it is also a scary place when you think about what they see.

We had training at WCCCA (dispatch/911) to make us more aware of what they do and how they operate. It was great to get these details.

The devotion this month is "Religion Gone Bad" and is posted on Myspace as a blog.

I know this is short and I am late in getting this out, the first part of August has kept me going.

Take Care.

John
